What causes a white frost? Why is there no frost on a cloudy or windy night, even though it is cold enough? Why does frost hit low ground and not high ground?

A white frost is frozen dew or vaper-During the day the surface of the earth and vegetation are warmed by the sun, and when the sun sets they begin to cool off, and the moisture in the atmosphere is condensed and deposited on the cool surfaces. In warm weather the deposit is dew, but in cold weather it is frozen and become frost. A frost can only occur when the surface temperature falls below 32 degrees, the freezing point of wa ter. If the temperature be between 32 and 28 degrees it is a light frost; if below 28 it is a heavy or killing frost. Clouds impede the endlation of heat from the earth, thereby preventing it from cooling to the frest point. and an enveloping fog or smoke may do the same thing. Frost may occur in the open country when a town, protected by a smoke cloud, is free from it, and in a valley frost sometimes occurs at the bottom because the layer 1844.
